Concerning the Potential Place of Refuge:

Thank you for the opportunity to comment . I think that the data that was collected was accurate and useful. My concerns are that there are in various locations year-round populations, indigenous and others, who base their subsistence use around these areas but also reach out in distance.

Each incident of a vessel in distress has different environmental risks. These areas deserve and should require a special measure of consideration in regards to these risks.

Finally, I received this information via a direct mailing and down loaded material from a web site, but many more did not receive any material. We shared material with our friends at Ellamar and Cordova, who were unaware of the study and plan. Making this project more inclusive to the various populations could have been better.
